

KAREEM KHAN

About the artist:-

Kareem Khan is though a self taught artist; his works are being viewed as appealing as most of professional artists. He works at the upsurge of emotions as he paints what his moods guide him to. A native of Silchar, Assam, Kareem Khan was abandoned from college. He came to Delhi in 1989 “to find out what art is all about.” No one theme or color can bind him, so his works are categorized by diversity. The bookseller, who would draw charcoal sketches of people on the pages of his worm-ridden books, is today an established painter.

Kareem Khan has been painting since last 37 years.

About his works:-

Just like his views, Kareem’s art works are also charged, strong, and electric.

In 2010, introducing his first solo exhibition, Beyond the Obvious, critic Alka Raghuvanshi wrote, “A deep melancholy hangs over Khan's works. Like fine mist it envelops them in an invisible net that draws the onlooker into its lair like a gossamer web, almost forcing them to linger. The metaphors are urban, the inspirational mainstay emerging from imagery that is almost European in style and content.”

Kareem Khan said “I think we all move... forward, sideways. I must not get boring. I must experience different things in life. I must show my age and experiences in my paintings. I must draw the journey that took me to become what I became.”